Q: jquery ui datepicker does not appear on client side for dynamically generated textbox I have a bunch of textboxes generated via ajax. when i add the jquery ui datepicker as $('#from').datepicker(); it does not appear. i can see it through firebug but it does not show on client side. I have tried including jquery ui manually in my script like this $(document).ready(function(){ $('#from').datepicker(); }); but it did not work. I have also tried removing other textboxes and datapicker as following but it did not solve the problem. I am using jquery-ui-1.10.3. if(typeof(element.getElementsByTagName('textarea')[i])!= "undefined" && typeof(element.getElementsByTagName('input')[i])!= "undefined") { $('#from').datepicker(); } the textbox looks like this, any ideas what might be wrong? A: If you dynamically generate elements that are not present on the page yet, you need to load the.js files. If you put the script-tag into the HTML of the page, it will load the script immediately, even if there are no elements with the id from on the page yet. EDIT: Forgot that you said that you're adding the.js files later, so this is the way to go: $(document).ready(function(){ $("#from").
